Bio

Terry McCue is an Ojibway Indian from the Curve Lake First Nation, in southeastern Ontario. Terry moved to Alberta in 1976 and continues to call it home. For 19 years Terry worked as a facilitator, conducting workshops across Canada to train substance abuse workers in Native communities. During that time he worked as a freelance illustrator, producing a variety of works including posters, book covers and illustrations for addiction manuals. He used this work to continually develop his skills as an artist. Terry's work can be found in private and corporate collections in Canada, the United States and Europe. Terry McCue is a self-taught painter who was lucky enough to spend time in his youth watching his cousin Arthur Schilling making art. These experiences provided a beacon pointing towards a possible future for himself. Many years later, at the age of 48, Terry began to make this dream come to life. For the last 22 years Terry has made his living from his art. Terry is currently represented by Canada House Gallery in Banff, AB, and the Winnipeg Art Gallery, at The Forks, in Winnipeg, MB. Terry's painting have evolved over the years to reflect a series of principles that sum up his personal philosophy.

Artist Statement:

"Humanity is an integral part of creation. Humour is spiritual sustenance. Respect for the natural world, and our place in it, is the key to personal understanding. Creativity is the realm of spirit."
