

A guide for holders of the International Association of Art card

Prepared with contributions from the Slovak Union of Visual Arts (Slovenská výtvarná únia) 2017

The International Association of Art (IAA/AIAP) is a non-governmental organization working in official partnership with UNESCO. Its objectives are to stimulate international cooperation among visual artists of all countries, nations or peoples, to improve the socio-economic position of artists nationally and internationally, and to defend their material and moral rights.

The IAA issues identity cards to professional visual artists. This card allows free or discounted admission to many galleries and museums in countries around the world. The card is a tool for the lifelong education of artists in their professional artistic research. These institutions, large or small, recognize the benefit they gain from enabling the artists, like art critics and journalists, to visit exhibitions, art events and collections of art, to carry on research, and to gain inspiration.

As a member within the IAA network, CARFAC National issues IAA cards exclusively to Canadian professional artists that are members of CARFAC upon request. Only National Committees of the IAA may issue the card.

Where to use the IAA card

This document includes a chart detailing selected institutions that offer free or discounted admission prices, or other perks to IAA card holders while travelling abroad. This information was obtained from surveying recent users of the card and IAA National Committees worldwide, and is updated regularly – most recently in 2017 by the Slovak Union of Visual Arts (SUVA). Users will find that different areas in Europe are more receptive to the card than others. For example, France readily recognizes it and provides free entry to many museums and galleries. However, some museums only offer reduced rates to holders of the card, while other museums offer extra services such as bypass access to skip general admission lines.

Most of the feedback from card holders specified that free or reduced entry to museums sometimes depended on the ticket sales person. When using the card at the entrance, be sure to explain that you are a professional artist from Canada and you have documentation from the IAA as proof.

We are always looking for feedback about the following items:

Institutions: Which art and/or cultural institutions did the IAA card permit free entry? What institutions offered entry at reduced rates? Which institutions denied the card? Were there any associated benefits with using the IAA card, such as access to a faster admission line?

Locations: What cities did you visit on your trip? Did you find certain cities or countries more accepting of the IAA card than others?

Tips for Using: What kinds of questions were you asked when you presented the card? Did you have any trouble using the card? Were there any interesting perks that you received when presenting your card? What was your general experience using the IAA card?

We would be grateful if you could send us any information regarding your experience using the IAA card. You can send quick notes, a narrative account or simply respond to the above questions. All responses will be kept confidential and advice will be presented anonymously. Please share them with the CARFAC National office: membership@carfac.ca, as well as the SUVA: office@svu.sk.

Below is a list of galleries that we have been informed offer reduced or free entrance to IAA card holders. Please inform us if you discover that this has changed.

Many museums and galleries are free for everyone. Doing an internet search about local museums ahead of time will help you determine which ones are always free, and which ones have free entry at specific times. In Madrid, for example, many museums are free in the evenings and it's best to get in line early.

Please let us know if you have any questions about the card. Thanks in advance for your feedback, and we wish you safe and happy travels.

The world is yours thanks to the IAA card!
